The default Android system is probably one of the most secure operating systems available. It has a wide range of security measures such as secure text messaging, biometrics, etc. But what if you can't or won't use these features on your phone? You've got a cracked screen, or your battery is drained, or something even worse is wrong with your phone. You can't seem to figure out what, and you're ready to throw in the towel, just sign over the copyright to your phone, or the warranty. Now, is there any guarantee your warranty or contract will be honored? Not really. So, we need an alternative. TinPhone is an app that will allow you to take control of your Android device without rooting, modifying its software, or voiding your warranty. The app works via a "software button" which is usually an OEM logo. With it, you can access all of the information, settings, contacts, and apps available on your Android device. You can unlock the device, use a simple interface to customize its functions, and even use a wireless keyboard to make it appear to be a PC. When you install the app, you'll be presented with a welcome screen. It contains a checklist of functions that you can perform with the software button. WHITFIELD, Plaintiff-Appellant,v.UNITED STATES of America, Defendant-Appellee. No. 91-16576. United States Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit. Argued and Submitted Oct. 7, 1992.Decided Oct. 16, 1992. Before D.W. NELSON, REINHARDT and KOZINSKI, Circuit Judges. 1 MEMORANDUM* 2 Whitfield appeals the district court's dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction of his claims for damages under the Federal Tort Claims Act (FTCA), 28 U.S.C. § 1346(b). We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1291, and we affirm. 3 Whitfield's complaints arise out of his purchase in 1987 of forged securities from fraudsters operating a Texas Ponzi scheme. Whitfield alleges that the Government officials who conducted the forfeiture and the sale of the securities breached a duty to protect him from the frauds. However, Whitfield did not file his complaint until October 1988, more than six years after the fraudulent transactions. 4 The FTCA bars suits against the United States unless the claimant first presents the claim to the appropriate agency within two years of the incident giving rise to the claim. 28 U.S.C. § 2401(b); 28 C.F.R. § 14.2(a). An "action shall be forever barred" unless filed within six years after the cause of action accrued. 28 U.S.C. § 2401(a); 28 C.F.R. § 14.3. Claims arising out of forgery are governed by § 2401(a), which "does not require that the claim be presented in an administrative proceeding." Shuman v. United States, 785 F.2d 641, 645 (9
